

Definition of an asylum seeker/a person claiming asylum:

An asylum seeker is a person who has left their country and is seeking protection from persecution and serious human rights violations in another country but who hasn't yet been legally recognised as a refugee and is waiting to receive a decision on their asylum claim.

This person would have applied for asylum on the grounds that returning to his or her country would lead to persecution on account of race, religion, nationality or political beliefs.

Asylum seekers are unable to claim benefits or work.

Definition of a refugee:

The definition of a refugee according to the 1951 United Nations Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees is:

“A person who owing to a well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion, is outside the country of his nationality and is unable or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to avail himself of the protection of that country; or who, not having a nationality and being outside the country of his former habitual residence as a result of such events, is unable or, owing to such fear, is unwilling to return to it.”

In the UK, a person becomes a refugee when government agrees that an individual who has applied for asylum meets the definition in the Refugee Convention they will “recognise” that person as a refugee and issue them with refugee status documentation.

Usually refugees in the UK are given five years leave to remain as a refugee. They must then must apply for further leave, although their status as a refugee is not limited to five years.

Definition of a migrant:

Someone who has moved to another country for other reasons, such as to find work.
